

Québec students benefit

Tuition hike for visa students

CUP, Quebec Bureau

Tuition fees for foreign visa students in Quebec with a full course load will jump to $1750 as of July first, according to sources within the Quebec Ministry of Education.

The sources said that Minister of Education, Jacques-Yvan Morin will announce the fee hike this week. They added "as a result of differential fees for visa students, Quebec residents' tuitions will probably be cut in half." Non-Quebec Canadian citizens' fees will remain at the level they are now.

"This will bring us into line with what is happening in other provinces and will end once and for all the system by which Quebec taxpayers are unfairly bearing the brunt for foreign students' education," said Jean-Francois Fuca, assistant to Morin. Fuca added that CEGEP fees will not be affected.

The provinces of Alberta and Ontario have already imposed similar differential fee systems for visa students. However, the increases are in the $300-$400 range compared to $1000 here.

Officials in the McGill administration said yesterday in an interview with CUP, that they are prepared to fight "this ignoble escalation which will surely turn McGill into a West Island commuter's school."

A source close to Principal Bell who asked not to be identified added, "The PQ government is only trying to starve McGill into submission. They know very well that our enrollment and government subsidies depends upon us being able to matriculate students from all over the world. Do they still hate the Commonwealth that much?"

At press time, CUP was unable to reach any residents of McGill's predominantly American student ghetto. However, several American staffers on the McGill Daily confessed they really had no idea of how they would be able to afford to return to McGill next term.

One American Daily staffer, Audrey Rock, added, "I've got to cancel my summer courses here, too. It's stupid to spend all that money just to go to school in Canada."

Jacques-Yvan Morin and differential fees: foreign students to pay three times more, Quebec students to pay 50% less.

The McIntyre Medical Building in easier days. Mail applications for admission to Med school have increased to the breaking point. As a result, the building has gotten its own postal code number.

McIntyre Medical Building gets its own postal code

By Bill Osler

Canada Post announced yesterday that the McIntyre Medical Sciences Building will be technically designated a "geographical region" of Canada, entitling it to a separate postal code. The move follows an avalanche of some 75,000 applications for admission to next year's medical class.

"Swinging the postal code was a piece of cake," said Raymond Sphincter, spokesman for the Admissions office. "In fact Canada Post was happy to oblige us. As it stands we get more mail than the Prime Minister and Alberta put together.

"The hard part is to figure a way of squeezing the new mail processing equipment into our budget."

Sphincter was referring to the string of six John Deere fork lifts and gang of fourteen burly post-doctoral candidates on temporary display in the McIntyre sixth floor lobby. They will be used in conjunction with the secretaries and readers to process the mountains of applications.

Negotiations are presently taking place with Kellogg of Canada to print next year's application forms on boxes of Kellogg's cornflakes. This measure, Sphincter assured the Daily, would help defray some of the processing costs.

"We haven't decided on the copy for the box," Sphincter said, "But it will be tasteful and imaginative. Nothing like 'Hey kids! Want to be the first on your block to perform a transurethral resection...'"

"Ours is a dignified profession, you know."

McGill professor in spy scandal?

By Sean deValera

McGill was linked last night with a plot "to restore capitalism and spread havoc" in China.

Professor Linn, of the East Asian Studies department appears to be involved and was even denounced personally by Radio Peking last night for his involvement with "the gang of four." Linn is a conettable of reaction, a confutalist who peddled reactionary concepts under the guise of dialectics to mislead people," said the broadcast.

Linn, who was reached at the Aeroflot office refused to comment on the charges, stating that he was looking forward to seeing his former friend Wang Ming in Moscow.

Professor Sam Newmoff, also of East Asian Studies said that he had suspected Linn all along: "That person always lacked a communist perspective." Newmoff added, "He treated students too nicely and motivated them with marks thereby not putting politics in command."

Dean of Arts Fogel, interrupted during one of his nocturnal saturnals, admitted to having been "hand in glove" with Linn. Fogel told the Daily: "Linn was hired to do just that, spread reactionary ideas at McGill to lay the foundations of a crypto-fascist coup in our university." Fogel admitted his dismay blaming the failure of the coup to "crafty analysts like Gotkind who can see a fascist where there is one."

Three members of the CLL (ml) were interviewed as they were removing their wares from the East Asian Studies Office, on McTavish. Carrying placards, tracks and books, one editor of the Forgery, the CLL house organ, stated that "We can't leave our stuff there any more, lest Linn sell them to finance his feudal lifestyle. Anyway, the revolution is off for the summer."

Emergency

Very important meeting to discuss the tuition fee hikes for foreign students. We will discuss letter writing campaigns, marches, mass action, and any way we can stop the increases from going through. American students will discuss formation of a new action committee around this issue. Today, Wednesday and Thursday. Union Building room 134. 2 pm.

Pinball gambling to support Students' Society

By Larry Hannent
of The Free Chevrn

For the first time in its history, McGill University will be graced by the pinging and clatter of bells, the clunking register of mechanical scoreboards, and the agonized cry of beaten players. Pinball machines are coming.

According to Physical Plant head, G. Sam Kingdom, the machines will be installed in Leacock 219 "on an experimental basis."

"If all goes well and we don't encounter any trouble from outside groups," added Kingdom, "then it's possible pinball will be a permanent fixture at McGill."

Last night, the first delivery of 15 multi-coloured units arrived and were escorted down to the basement storeroom at Leacock. However, word got out about the existence of the machines and students were soon running in from night classes, the residences, or the student ghetto to marvel at the machines.

"This is unbelievable," said one student who had gotten out of bed and run to the Leacock storeroom after receiving a telephone call about the machines. "I never thought I'd see the day when McGill University would let its students have some fun."

"I guess I got to hand it to Principal P.N. Ball or the ASUS or somebody," he added gleefully.

Principal Ball could not be reached for comment, but a McGill official close to Ball denied that the Principal had anything to do with the machines.

"As far as we're concerned, said the official, "this is just some cheap joke and something is going to be done about it, fast!"

Kingdom refuted the official's charges stating, "I don't know who signed the original order, but I don't care. If it works out well, then the machines will remain. All we're trying to do is work for the basic interests of the students."

Students marvelling at the new pin ball machines, last night in the Leacock basement. The machines will be installed upstairs in room 219.

Prof named to Museum

By Bernadette Devlin

James Mallowry, veteran professor of Political Science at McGill, has been appointed Assistant Director of the Redpath Museum. He is expected to start next September, giving up all his courses except Political Science 221 (Canadian government).

Professor John Lowize, Director of the Redpath Museum, said the nomination "was a reward for 25 years of teaching and research which brought the University such a good name."

He does not see any conflicts arising between Mallowry and himself, despite different educations. "Mr. Mallowry will quickly learn the functioning of a museum. After all, isn't he a legend in his own time?" he inquired.

Interviewed later, Professor Mallowry said he was glad for the decision. "I've always like old things," he stated. Mallowry will be in charge of a new department created for him: documents on British and Canadian constitutional law.

Mr. Mallowry revealed that the Redpath museum will "repatriate" the British North America Act for the exclusive use of his students in Politics 221. "Nowadays, without incentives you can't increase attendance to your courses," he lamented.

In conclusion, Professor Mallowry stated: "After a fulfilling life devoted to scholarship, the Museum is the right place for me. I'm sure everybody agrees — above all my students."

LETTERS

Argentinian Imperialism
To the Daily:

I am writing to congratulate you on your fine coverage of the situation in the Falkland Islands. As a former resident of those islands, I am gratified to see that the Daily has thrown its enthusiastic support behind the citizens of that country.

These sheep farmers have been neglected by the world press for entirely too long. The fascist imperialist warmongers in Argentina must be labelled for what they are in the press for world opinion to swing against them.

Already the United Nations has condemned these vicious exploiters of the sheep farmers at numerous Manhattan cocktail parties. With world-wide attention being focused on Argentina through the efforts of the Daily, surely a resolution cannot be far behind, and the Falkland Islanders will have finally a world body looking out for their basic interests. Let these simple folk continue to tend their sheep, and let the Argentinians keep their filthy grasping paws off my homeland. Long live the free Falkland Islands!

Sincerely,
Virginia Capehorn

Wages for housework revised
To the Daily:

As a housewife of some twenty-five years standing, and the mother of some five McGill students, I have been reading with great interest the article which has recently appeared in your newspaper about wages for housework. First let me say that I was shocked to see that there are women in this country who truly believe that the woman's lot can truly be improved if they are paid for the household duties which they perform. I would point out that few if any women of my acquaintance would accept such wages even if they were offered, and certainly none would want to burden their husbands with such extra payments, as it is of course, getting harder and harder to live on your basic upper-middle class salary.

Second, I believe that our lower class sisters wouldn't know what to do with a salary if they were to receive one. What on earth would they spend it on besides food?

Finally those hoity-toity upper class gals would just stick these wages in their investment portfolios, thus making it impossible for hubby to spend it on the people who need his business.

In conclusion, let me say that I will continue to work for my family as faithfully as I have in the past. The slogan for Canadian women must be, "If offered, I will not accept wages, and if granted, I will immediately give them back to my husband"

Yours in lib-erty,

Doris Higston

Se debe escribir mas artículos de esta comunidad en québec, su vida, sus costumbres, y su lengua increíble.

Exotic forms of life to be marketed

[CUP] — A Washington, D.C. public interest group has released the names of seven corporations it claims are engaging in secret experiments to create and market exotic, new forms of life.

The people's business commission says that the seven companies are using the "dangerous and highly volatile new technology called recombinant DNA to create plant and animal life forms that have never existed before."

The group charges that the secret experiments are being conducted without government supervision, despite warnings from leading scientists around the world that devastating new diseases could develop and escape from the laboratories.

The seven companies allegedly engaged in the research are Miles Laboratories; Eli Lilly Company, Hoffman-Laroche; Upjohn Company, Merck, Sharpe and Dohme Research Laboratories, Pfizer Incorporated and Abbot Laboratories.

ASUS EXECUTIVE ELECTIONS

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 16th

McGILL
ARTS & SCIENCE
UNDERGRADUATE SOCIETY

PRESIDENT

Bill Grossman

Bill Grossman is looking towards making McGill a more fun and active learning experience. He is looking for helpful, energetic people with this same desire, to help run future activities. He works as a D.J. and Producer on Radio McGill and is the player / coach of the Ghetto Ghouls football team.

He has tried to initiate many new programs the past two years such as: a McConnell Hall Pub; a less expensive and more casual co-ed dormitory from Purvis Hall, and an A.S.U.S. T-Shirt; but he was not in the proper administration position to execute these programs.

Karl Stockbridge

Over the past year the A.S.U.S. has contributed a great deal to student life at McGill: concerts, movies, speakers, and a comprehensive Arts and Science course evaluation that will be available before registration next fall.

As chairman of the A.S.U.S. Finance Committee and editor of the Arts course evaluation, I have gained the experience needed to continue, and improve, these activities next year.

If elected I will be responsive to your input. I will make every attempt to find out what you want done with your money, through the use of a questionnaire at registration, as was done this year, and more Open Meetings. It's your money that runs the A.S.U.S. and you should have more say in how it's spent.

If you want your money managed responsibly, if you want to see the A.S.U.S. continue to be a constructive and innovative force on campus, VOTE STOCKBRIDGE on March 16.

U3 REPRESENTATIVE

Bob Lesperance

My two years at McGill have shown me the valuable role played by the A.S.U.S. on campus. The positive feedback which the Association has accumulated amongst my fellow students leads me to believe that the A.S.U.S. has been effective in countering student apathy. I would like to see continued the same type of activities already presented with a few additions—a second-hand book store for Arts & Science; an increased and continued dialogue with Faculty; and most important of all, I believe that the U3 Rep. should be readily available to all 3rd-year students.

Gary Littlejohn

The role of the U3 Representative is not an easy one to fulfill. Although he / she is given no function "per se", the person filling in this office must show initiative and responsibility. When organizing the activities of the A.S.U.S., the executive delegates substantial duties to the U3 Representative. Only a person with organizational skills and devotion can do this job correctly. I have the firm conviction that I can fulfill these qualifications.

Furthermore, having lived for two years in the McGill residences, it has permitted me to understand and to fully acquaint myself with our university community. My being bilingual will also prove to be a valuable asset in identifying with a larger number of students on this campus.

On March 16, vote for Gary Littlejohn for U3 Representative.

REPRESENTATIVE-AT-LARGE

Bill Mitchell

This past year has been a rebuilding period for the A.S.U.S. in which it has made tremendous improvements in the manner it is run and the activities it offers to students. The folk concert series, pubs and films of this year have all been a result of the Improved A.S.U.S.

Further improvements can be made if the A.S.U.S. Executive continues to be run as a responsible body. I believe that I can serve you in a responsible and reliable manner on the A.S.U.S. Executive.

On March 16 elect Bill Mitchell for Representative-At-Large of the Arts and Science Undergraduate Society.

Presstime

Rashmi Varma

Each year $4.00 out of your total Students' Society fees goes to waste on the A.S.U.S. This waste is partly due to the lack of organization. I'm willing to put my time and effort into it to see the A.S.U.S. work for us. So vote on March 16. After all it doesn't take that much energy to vote (less A.T.P. molecules than you think).

ARTS REPRESENTATIVE TO STUDENTS' SOCIETY

Grace Aldrovandi

In addition to working hard to prevent my schooling from interfering with my education, I have been actively involved in organizing the Asylum Coffeehouse and the forthcoming Monopoly Championship, during my first year at McGill. As Arts representative to the Students' Society, I intend to organize activities conducive to a more relaxed and enjoyable atmosphere through greater student-administration rapport, and to establish the Student Union as the nucleus of a dynamic, stimulating and fun social life.

My position enables me to extend this policy, not only at the undergraduate level, but throughout the entire University community. Furthermore, I shall voice loudly any justifiable complaints and comments. Both Arts and Science students please feel free to approach me with comments, criticisms and suggestions.

Terry Reed

U3, JH in Philosophy and Political Science, President of the Film Society, student rep on Committee for a Continuing Review of University Government.

The problem of the Students' Society is obvious. While student fees have not changed since 1964, the cost of maintaining the Union Building has tripled. This increasing burden has resulted in decreasing revenue for student activities. Through the actions of Senate it has become constitutionally impossible to raise fees in time for next year. Therefore I am committed to requesting that Senate assume fiscal responsibility for some of the costs of the Union Building—a building which it owns.

McGill Athletics in recruitment scandal

By Ian McWong

The McGill Athletics Department has been accumulating a slush fund, presumably for the purposes of assisting the recruiting of athletes for its intercollegiate teams. These revelations were made apparent to the Dally recently by confidential sources, inside the department.

The fund, believed to be motivated out of concern for McGill's continually disappointing performances in intercollegiate sports, will be accompanied by discussions with the Registrar's Office for joint action with the Athletics Department on evaluating the admission of students with promising athletic ability but poor academic records. The Dally's source disclosed that the accumulation of the fund and the discussions with the Registrar are both well in progress and that the Athletics Department has already approached a number of "prospective students."

Discrimination

The discussions with the Registrar are believed to encompass such matters as waivers of the March 1st application for the fall term and of the high school leaving certificate as a prerequisite for acceptance to the university.

The source added that Athletics Department has been employing the argument of unjust discrimination to back up their proposals. "They (the Department) seem to feel," said the source, "that it's unfair for the university to prohibit the admission of students who would have as much, if not more, to offer to the school and society than any straight A candidate."

The disposition of the slush fund or under what auspices it is being accumulated is uncertain at present. However, it is reported that Athletics Director Robert Dubeau was spotted recently at Moishe's Steak House presiding over an unofficial banquet honouring a number of local star CEGEP athletes.

Another source added that a new budget requirement was included in this year's estimates for a number of well-paying jobs starting this September to periodically inspect the shower plumbing at Molson Stadium, the Currie gym, and the Winter Stadium.

Local sportscaster Dick Irvin points an accusing finger upon learning of McGill's slush fund.

CEGEP stars paid off

By The Storm

The McGill Dally has learned that two local CEGEP basketball stars have indicated their intention to attend McGill next fall.

Coming in the wake of today's announcement that McGill has accumulated a slush fund for the recruitment of athletes, the Dally talked with the two ballplayers, Vanier's Rick Hungar and Dawson's Trevor Bennet. Bennet, a former Harlem playground standout, stated matter of factly that his 1.2 GPA was not even discussed when he talked to McGill recruiters, and that he had been offered "standard" financial aid. When pressed to define "standard" Bennet refused comment, except to say that his contract called for

"ample" spending money.

Hungar, conversely, seemed annoyed when approached by the Dally. Fumed Hungar, "Bennet received the same deal I got, and I just used him up in the CEGEP championship this year. I burned him inside, outside, and on the boards, made him look like a turkey, our team won, I was MVP, leading scorer, leading rebounder, and besides, made him foul out. Also, I'm a Canadian. So he gets the same contract as me, and he can't even speak French."

When asked if he spoke French, Hungar replied, "Of course, I can cuss out referees, order a beer, and lots of stuff. That's not bad for a kid from Westmount."

Neither player has decided which faculty to enroll in at McGill; they apparently have decided to leave the decision up to McGill coach Butch Staples.

McGill Athletic Director Robert Dubeau refused comment on the status of the two newcomers, but a source inside his office stated that they will be tutored by graduate students, no matter which field they enter, and that a contract with a term-paper agency had just been signed by Dubeau.

So, it looks like the Redmen have a good shot at repeating as QUAA champs this year, with the acquisition of these two standouts. However, Concordia is rumoured to be going after the entire starting five of Power Memorial High School in New York City, and could put up a good fight. Should be quite a season!

Slush...

Slush or muck

Dubeau, who took over the post of Athletics Director last December, denied the existence of the fund and the alleged practices when asked to comment. "What's this crap about a slush fund?" he said. "What are you trying to do? Rake up some muck?"

It might be noted however that Dubeau, in an interview with the Daily earlier this year, had stated that the Athletics Department intended to engage in recruiting, though he gave no indication of what or how many resources would be committed to such activity.

The Department's Business Manager, John M. Forsythe, took great exception to the existence of the slush fund when asked by the Daily though it is believed that he either misunderstood the question or was evading the issue.

"I'll have you know," said Forsythe, "that the ice-making equipment at the Winter Stadium is in perfect working order, and furthermore has never failed us. We're very proud of our facilities and the way which they have performed."

The Head of Women's Athletics, Dr. Gladys Bean, claimed to know nothing of the fund or the recruiting activities, but remarked "It doesn't surprise me one bit. Men's athletics always receive more money, whether it's over or under the table. It's just another example of how the women get screwed in favour of the men."

Budgetary question

Little is known about the source of money for the slush fund or how it is to be utilized. Unconfirmed reports have it that there still exists a multi-thousand dollar budget item for the annual re-sodding of Molson Stadium. Questions are being raised about the implications of this for the artificial turf which is currently installed in the stadium.

Another source has stated the slush fund will be used for tuition subsidies and cash meal allowances for prospective athletic talent which can be drawn to McGill. It is also believed that certain CEGEP and high school coaches will receive kickbacks for any of their current athletes they can convince to attend McGill.

If this is so, a local bidding war with Concordia University can be expected to take place in the near future. Guy Delisle, Executive Director of the governing body Québec University Athletic Association (QUAA), refused to confirm whether the QUAA will attempt to regulate this bargaining process as in professional baseball. Rumours have been circulating that a number of star CEGEP athletes have engaged agents to handle their pending negotiations and financial affairs.

Graduate Faculty Summer Research Fellowship
Value: About $1000

These awards are made so that the recipients can continue their research through the Summer.

Deadline for application is April 1st., and winners are announced on 1st of May.

Applications should be made on the standard McGill Graduate Faculty Application form for Fellowships, but only two letters of recommendation are required along with your latest McGill transcripts.

Students who are currently registered at McGill and who do not now hold a major fellowship ($4000 or more) can apply. If you have applied for a Graduate Faculty major award, you may ask that your current application be considered for a Summer Research Fellowship as well. Please call Mrs. Riopel (392-5089), during the last week of March or the first week of April, to arrange for this transfer.
